Remote Visualisation

The concept of remote visualization (RV) is to perform computation and initial display generation on a remote system. The images are then streamed and displayed on a local system. An interactive back-channel is provided. Thus the user is able to visualize and interact locally in real-time with the data on the remote system using its memory, disk space, CPU and GPU power.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Overview RV</th>
<th>What is remote visualization? How does it work?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Getting started ...</td>
<td>Quick guide for using a terminal shell</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VNC Server on Login-Nodes</td>
<td>Remote Desktop on Login Nodes (no Graphics Cards!)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>